

One of the most extraordinary love stories told for the first time in their own words The Polar Museum presents the

LOVE LETTERS

of Robert Falcon and Kathleen Scott read by Angela Pleasence and Oliver Cotton

Little lady don't fly away I've the dread that you can't be quite real and so for the disease there is but one cure to see you

*I did write to you one word only as far as I can remember
"Delight"*

*Dearest Darling
we are in a very tight corner and I have doubts of pulling through In our short lunch hours I take advantage of a very small measure of warmth to write letters preparatory to a possible end the first is naturally to you on whom my thought mostly dwell waking or sleeping*

Write & tell me you shall go to the S. Pole. It's got to be done I'll hurry up & don't leave a stone unturned & love me more & more because I need it

*Darling to have a real good look at you Right into your dear eyes that should be worth everything!
For I love you still, more than anything in the whole world! I've worried my life out to be "a good wife to you" all this long time*
